Letter from your President

Greetings!

I hope everything is well and you had a great holiday season. At the time of this writing, it is time to brace for the winter and look forward to milder weather which is just around the corner. Also, it is time on the rough weather days to take the time to look back and to look forward. What did we do right and what did we do wrong? And as Peter Marshall once said "Lord where we were wrong, make us willing to change; where we were right make us easy to live with."

There are still plenty of folks out there looking for registered black Angus bulls. I wish them the best of luck. At this time they are going to need it. If you have bulls let me know and I will pass the word along. And please do not forget the Bricton Bull Sale coming up soon.

The GAA Annual Meeting and Banquet is upon us. Plan now to be in Athens the last Saturday evening in January. Your GAA Officers and Directors need your participation then and throughout the year.

This note to you will be my last one as my term expires in January 2012. I will make a few short comments. I would briefly say to you that change has and always will be constant. Your anticipation and reaction is what counts. You are about breeding the best beef cattle in the industry. As the advertisement goes, she has no equal. Stay the course and you will be rewarded. Take the higher ground and take care of your customer. It is harder to find a new loyal customer than it is to keep one. You certainly do not want to be wondering who is going to buy your bulls or cows at the next sale or the one thereafter. Support your fellow Angus breeders. They are trying hard and working hard. As far as competition goes, no one can take your customers from you, if you have done your homework. There will be short term fads in the beef business as is the case for all other enterprises. Yet, there will always be Angus in the pedigree. Worry not about fads. These will pass. Enjoy yourself and fellow Angus breeders. It is a truly a society and not a typical trade association.

I was not a stranger when I started writing these notes to you. In fact, many of us have grown older and I hope wiser together over the course of several decades. I will not say good bye to you because I am not planning on going away. I hope to see you in January.

Sincerely,

Larry Bramblett

GJAA member named to National FFA office

Cain Thurmond achieved the rank of Eagle Scout. He earned numerous academic and leadership awards in high school and college. He's served summer missions to Peru.

And now, he's a National FFA officer.

As a conclusion to the 84th National FFA Convention in Indianapolis, Thurmond was elected National FFA Southern Region vice president for 2011-12.

"My life has been shaped by the emptiness of the roads in my Jefferson, Ga., community on Sunday mornings, droves of people at Saturday Farmers' Markets, dust-covered floors in agricultural education classrooms and the love and support from my family and my community," he said. "I'm looking forward to taking my life experiences and helping lead the National FFA Organization as a national officer."

For the next year, Thurmond and his national officer peers will be the face and spirit of FFA. Collectively, they'll travel more than 100,000 miles throughout the country as they engage top leaders in business, government and education and lead a host of personal growth and leadership training seminars for FFA members. The team will also help set policies that will shape the future of the National FFA Organization and promote agricultural literacy in general.

Originally from Jefferson, Ga., Thurmond is the son of Phil and Susie Thurmond. He is a junior at University of Georgia majoring in agricultural and applied economics. He is a member of the Jefferson High School FFA chapter in Jefferson, Ga., led by Ken Bray, David Calloway and Cliff Tippens.

Thurmond

"Representation is more than a title.

It is dedication, loyalty and believing in the calling of your organization," he said. "Nothing we do on Earth will last forever. But if I make a positive difference in the life of someone else, there is no limit to how far that good deed may last."

Joining Thurmond to serve as national FFA officers for 2011-12 are Ryan W. Best of New Mexico as National FFA president, Jason Troendle of Minnesota as national secretary, Kenneth D. Quick Jr. of New York as Eastern Region vice president, Alicia Hodnik of Wisconsin as Central Region vice president and Seth Pratt of Idaho as Western Region vice president.

Formerly known as Future Farmers of America, the National FFA Organization provides agricultural education to 540,379 student members in grades seven through 12 who belong to one of 7,489 local FFA chapters throughout the U.S., Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

News from the National Junior Angus Association

Hello Georgia Juniors! I hope everyone enjoyed their Christmas break and are on to a good start with their new year's resolution. This past year has been another great year for our association that was full of involvement, competition, and comradely. Georgia juniors did an amazing job representing our state at so many shows and events, such as, the National Junior Angus Show in Harrisburg, PA and the Raising the Bar event in Clemson, SC.

Clay Williams
NJAA Chairman

Also, I would like to congratulate Cain Thurmond for the huge honor of being elected to serve as the National FFA Southern Region Vice President for 2012, this is a huge honor for Cain and we all should be proud of this former GJAA officer.

Again, the year ahead of us holds countless amounts of opportunities for our members and I encourage each of you to take advantage of those opportunities. Coming this spring, March 30-April 1, the NJAA will host a "Raising the Bar" event in the great city of Columbus, Ohio on the Ohio State University's campus. For those who have never been, the event is a three day conference full of workshops, tours, and fun that will help to build stronger leaders within state associations. Along with "Raising the Bar" this spring are shows that would be great to attend, so make plans to head to Timonium, Maryland for both Eastern Regionals and Atlantic Nationals, as well as, Harrisonburg, Virginia for MAJAC Regional Preview Show. Just as all junior Angus events, these shows are great fun with more than just a cattle show. Visit www.NJAA.info for more information on all these events.

Like always, I would like to encourage all of you to get involved in this association and breed. Hope everyone enjoys the coming months and I will see y'all around. Bleed black and let your Angus pride show.

New embryo transfer rule began January 1

A new embryo transfer (ET) rule, which took place effective on Jan. 1, 2012, requires Angus producers who want to register embryo transfer (ET) calves to request an ET authorization when the first owner of a calf is different than the owner of the donor dam.

The new Rule 104(d)(12), adopted at the American Angus Association®'s September Board meeting, states: If the first owner of the calf is different than the owner of record of the donor female, and the embryo removal date is on or after Jan. 1, 2012, the owner of the donor female must obtain and transfer an ET Authorization to the account of the first owner before the calf is eligible for registration.

"Embryos may pass through several hands before a calf is born and registered," says Don Laughlin, Association director of member services. "ET Authorizations allow the person who is responsible for flushing the donor cow to confirm dates, sires and type of flush (such as in vitro or split embryo) on a calf through the Association's AAA Login service."

The authorization will confirm ET registrations when the breeder and first owner are not the same, creating a record between the buyer and seller of the embryos.

The new rule will not affect every Angus producer. In fact, fiscal year numbers at the end of FY 2011 showed approximately 15% of all embryo registrations would need an ET authorization to be registered, if the rule was previously in place.

"Before the new rule, the sire, donor dam, embryo removal date, sex of the calf and the birth date from the first owner (the person registering the ET calf) was known. Now, thanks to information from the person who owned the donor dam at the time of the flush, we will know the parentage, range of age and possibly the sex on any pregnant recipients. This increases accuracy of the Association's records and decreases errors," Laughlin says.

He adds, "This rule will also provide an avenue for a seller to monitor registration of embryos or confirmed pregnancies from the donor of which they no longer have control."

ET Authorization is free and processed through AAA Login, similar to artificial insemination (A.I.) certificates. Contact the member service department at 816-383-5100 for more information.
